

Student Teachers

Qualified students of an institution of higher learning who are registered for practice teaching at the elementary or secondary level may use district schools for classes in observation and practice teaching.

College instructors in charge of teacher training are granted the privilege of visiting student teachers working at district schools, at a time selected by the supervisory instructor.

The principal will consult with teachers well in advance of assigning a student teacher. A maximum of one student per teacher per year is recommended. The teacher and principal must agree that it is advantageous before multiple student teacher assignments can occur.
